

New Telemarketing Laws Effective Oct 16, 2013

Outbound Compliance

Be Prepared for the New Telemarketing Laws

As of October 16, 2013, the FCC will enforce new rules pertaining to AutoDialers and calls to Cell Phones. In today's communications world, many consumers have done away with their traditional "house phone", preferring to communicate through their cell phones. This makes calls more personal and as you've heard many times before, "no telemarketer calls". This trend, along with modifications to the Telephone Consumer Protection Act (TCPA), will now prohibit any AutoDialer from calling a cellphone, without prior consent.

This is prompting many Telemarketing firms to change their method of doing business, primarily outbound calling through "live" agents. No longer will a "robot" call consumers, however a live caller may call them on their cellphone. This has prompted many Contact Centers to move away from AutoDialers and into a larger, more cost effective manual system. This means that several advanced features, found inherently in AutoDialers, such as Call Recording, are no longer available to the Contact Center and must be purchased separately. This is further complicated when the Contact Center must adhere to Compliance Rules, where credit card information and financial transactions must be processed, and consumer credit information must be guarded and protected in the Call Recording System (PCI Compliance). This requirement is driving many Contact Centers to look into powerful, cost effective Call Recording System such as Majuda Voice.
